

Binding of the B-Raf inhibitors dabrafenib and vemurafenib to human serum albumin: a biophysical and molecular simulation study

Maria Russi^a, Gabriele Cavalieri^a, Domenico Marson^a, Erik Laurini^{a,*}, Sabrina Pricl^{a,b}

^a Molecular Biology and Nanotechnology Laboratory (MolBNL@UniTS), DEA, University of Trieste, Piazzale Europa 1, 34127 Trieste, Italy

^b Department of General Biophysics, Faculty of Biology and Environmental Protection, University of Lodz, ul. Pomorska 141/143, 90-236 Łódź, Poland

* Corresponding author. E-mail address: erik.laurini@dia.units.it (Erik Laurini)

Figure S1: (A) Fluorescence quenching spectra of 2 μ M HSA alone (red) and in presence of 6% v/v of ethanol (red). The dotted line at the bottom shows the fluorescence spectrum of DAB alone. (B) Fluorescence quenching spectra of 2 μ M HSA alone (black) and in presence of 6% v/v of ethanol (cyan). The dotted line at the bottom shows the fluorescence spectrum of VEM alone.

